Who we are

Thank you for visiting our website. We hope that you will benefit from it and that this website will be a means of communication between you.

- All materials displayed on the site are not intended for sale, advertising, criticism, reduction or increase in value... We present them only from a technical and practical point of view, and we analyze only from the technological and cognitive side.
- We have not stolen and will not steal any company name, we are a group of technicians and specialists. We do not sell anything and we do not buy anything. We only provide confirmed information, which is the drain of years of experience, supported by the necessary pictures, files and documents that indicate the correctness of the information...
- We do not manipulate anyone or impose anything on anyone. On the contrary, we want to help people in all areas.
- We are not responsible for visitors' interactions with each other, we do not accept any responsibility for incorrect transactions or information, and we do not encourage anyone to do anything.
- All images and files are mostly ours... Sometimes we have to quote or copy the rest of the site, but our top priority is to write correct and reliable information.
- Anyone who is qualified to join us can write to us and can be a writer in our little family.
- There is no objection to copying or stealing our posts and photos, as long as the source is acknowledged. Whoever distorts or abuses our posts, we will deal with them in various ways and they will be punished.
- As for the ads... we apologize for their appearance and invite you to click on them and visit them, as they are our only source of income and encourage us to shine and do more work to document the correct and useful information.
- Our website has been hacked and defaced many times, although we do not sow discord, market unethical products, or steal from anyone.
- Long live Tunisia, free and proud, and long live its people, generous and honorable ...Thanks to those who supported us, and we thank those who will support us, and we are at the service of everyone.
